Q: What are some healthy options for insects and other small animals? I am planning to take my toddler to a farm/forest on my next excursion. I am going to buy a small bag of fish feed to attract a variety of small animals. What are some other relatively cheap options that will attract most of the same animals, but are less expensive to buy? A: From my research, and without testing this, here is a list of foods that attract various bug species: Leaf vegetables - lettuces, various greens, spring bulbs,... Grains Dried fruits Milk Yeast (especially deactivated) Anything that resembles food. I have been reading about the importance of protein in the diet of bugs, and some fruit and dried cereal options may be overburdened in protein, but the list is worth exploring. I think that a gardener would be familiar with most of these. For those that are not, here is a partial list of species that gardeners have encountered: Grasshopper Fly Louse Flycatcher Aphid Ladybird Caterpillar Damselfly Various types of beetles Dragonfly Mosquito Dog-flea

Q: How to read a "csv" file in an ASP.NET Web API with Entity Framework? I need to read an "external" csv file to a database using Entity Framework. I have to do it by an ASP.NET Web API because I need to call this API using jQuery $.ajax(), passing the csv file as a request parameter. So, I need to read the file passing the path of the file in the request to the API method. My problem is that I don't know how to read the file. I tried to use a StreamReader and a StreamWriter, but I realized that it would be the only way to do it, but is there an "easy" way to do it? I read a lot of questions and answers in this site about
