Maltego Features: See the links below for a brief description of the features of Maltego. A: If you only need the ability to look at data, you could try yEd. It's very, very simple to use and can take any data you have available and create a graph. A: For a free alternative to yEd with a more user friendly interface, check out Navicat. It's easier to use than yEd, the GUI is more intuitive, and it's much more powerful.

#PITTSBURGH - A lot has happened in the Pittsburgh Steelers' locker room in the past seven days. First, there was the report that quarterback Ben Roethlisberger was getting booed at a recent autograph signing event. Then, there was the report that Roethlisberger's locker isn't stocked with the same items as the rest of his teammates. And then, there was the tweet from Roethlisberger's wife that was posted on the team's Twitter page. The tweet was in response to the media's questions about the items in Roethlisberger's locker, and it read: "The media has been ridiculous!! It's a joke. First I don't understand why they didn't do this a long time ago." Now, it appears that no one's locker is stocked with the same items as everyone else, according to the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. But another Twitter account, @StealingBen, says Roethlisberger is just annoyed with the "hysteria" and "sensationalism" around the locker room. The account has posted only the tweets from Roethlisberger's account, and it's almost completely void of any negative or positive comments about the Steelers or other players. It seems to be pure Roethlisberger. A search of Twitter on Roethlisberger has revealed only one other tweet from his account on Sept. 13. That tweet is about the touchdown pass he threw to Emmanuel Sanders against the San Diego Chargers on Sept. 11. The Steelers apparently deleted the tweets that came
